A NOTE FROM THE ARTIST

On Wednesday, October 14th, 2009, I took a train ride from Berlin to Warsaw, via Poznań. I was with two friends of mine, a violist and a violinist from Israel.

They played music on the train.

The journey took about 5 hours.

We arrived on the same evening in Poznań, Poland.

They didn't play any more but I listened to them talking about music: music has no past, music has no future, music only happens when it is in the room, when it reaches your ears...

We all went to bed.

Next morning I woke early and went for a swim in the local pool. It was only 5.30 in the morning but already the Polish national synchronised swimming team was in training.

When they left I took the opportunity to swim a little by myself.

My friends arrived and played some music.

They told me that this pool was actually a synagogue.

In 1939 the Nazis in Poland had taken it from the Jewish community and simply turned it into a swimming pool.

We left Poznań that afternoon and went to Warsaw.

The rest is simply music.

INTRODUCTION TO THE EXHIBITION

Douglas Gordon is a Scottish artist who creates work that questions the complexities of memory and perception, both from an individual and collective position. His practice encompasses video and film, installation, sculpture, photography and text. Through his work, Gordon investigates dualities such as life and death, good and evil, right and wrong, as well as exploring universal human experiences like the passage of time.

This exhibition focuses on his major film installation k.364 and marks the premiere of this work in a public gallery in the UK.

Installed across Gallery 2, k.364 features two Israeli musicians of Polish descent (Avri Levitan and Roi Shiloah) travelling to Poland from Berlin by train. Shown on two large-scale screens and with layered audio, the film follows the two men through urban and rural landscapes in countries whose tragic and violent history is barely resolved for them.

Gordon films the musicians on this personal journey, isolating intimate moments when a passionate love of music seems to move between them. The details captured within the frame of Gordon's lens are close-cropped and intense, focusing on the musician's faces, their hands, their instruments and their gaze towards one another when performing.

Leaving Berlin, they first travel through Poznań, home of the celebrated Amadeus Chamber Orchestra. The journey concludes with the musicians' performance, at the Warsaw Philharmonic concert hall, of Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante in E-flat major (also known as Mozart's k.364, from which the title of this piece is derived).

Installed in Gallery 1 (as well as above the Information Space outside the gallery) are a series of poetic interventions by the artist which take the form of vinyl text on the walls. They read:

from the moment you read these words, until you meet someone with brown eyes from the moment you read these words, until you meet someone with green eyes from the moment you read these words, until you meet someone with blue eyes

These works are a glimpse into Gordon's ongoing series of text interventions in galleries which address a viewer directly and open up a dialogue between the artist and the public considering his work. They are often mysterious, poetic phrases such as this, underlining Gordon's fascination with language and its potential for ambiguity, obscurity and multiple readings.

For this exhibition at DCA, Gordon has chosen to invert the text relating to blue eyes. He is renowned for playing with mirroring and inversion in his practice, often making these optical shifts with texts to disturb a viewer's perception. This particular text can also be seen, the correct way around, in the framed works on the other side of the gallery. It may also be worth noting that the artist's own eyes are blue.

The suite of works opposite is titled Dark Burnt Scores. These framed works correlate directly to k.364 and comprise burnt remnants of musical scores of the violin and viola parts of Mozart's composition, on the left side and right side respectively. Gordon's practice has long involved fire, burning and scorching objects, from photographs of Hollywood film stars to whole grand pianos. These scores allude to the partial destruction of a culture and of a shared language, to the instantaneous nature of listening to music as it disappears once it reaches the listener's ears, and to the creation of new, fragile but beautiful objects where notes and refrains can just be glimpsed.

In our current moment of militaristic upheaval and violence in Europe, these works use the power of music to form an intimate document of relationships between individuals, landscapes and nations.

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Douglas Gordon (b.1966, Glasgow, Scotland) lives and works in Berlin, Glasgow and Paris. His practice encompasses video and film, installation, sculpture, photography, and text.

Through his work, Gordon investigates human conditions like memory and the passage of time, as well as universal dualities such as life and death, good and evil, right and wrong.

Gordon's work has been exhibited globally in major solo exhibitions including the Neue Nationalgalerie in Berlin (1999), Tate Liverpool (2000), MOCA in Los Angeles (2001 and 2012), Hayward Gallery in London (2002), National Gallery of Scotland (2006), Museum of Modern Art in New York (2006), Tate Britain in London (2010), Tel Aviv Museum of Art (2013), as well as in Musée d'Art moderne de la Ville de Paris (2014). His film works have been invited to the Festival de Cannes, Toronto International Film Festival, Venice Film Festival, Edinburgh International Film Festival, BFI London Film Festival, Festival del Film Locarno and New York Film Festival, among many others. Gordon received the 1996 Turner Prize.

In the Evening There is Feeling: Reading Rosa Luxemburg

Thu 7 July, 18:00–19:30

Free, but ticketed

Please book in advance

In the Evening There is Feeling is DCA's Exhibitions reading group. It takes its name from Gertrude Stein's 1914 book Tender Buttons and focuses, in an informal and welcoming way, on feminist and/or queer texts from the worlds of art and literature.

This season, set alongside Gordon's work that considers relationships in different geographical and historical contexts in both Poland and Germany, we are looking at a key early 20th century thinker on power and radical politics: Rosa Luxemburg (1871–1919).

Born in Zamość, Poland, Luxemburg is widely regarded as one of the most creative writers of modern socialism and the foremost female theoretician of European radicalism. Her wide-ranging and incisive works, which include studies on capitalism's drive for global expansion, the relation between spontaneity and organisation, and the inseparability of democracy and socialism, have made her a touchstone for thinkers and activists around the world. Her fiercely independent intellect and uncompromising defence of human liberty speaks powerfully to our present moment.

This session will consider a selection of excerpts from The Letters of Rosa Luxemburg, reading some key correspondence written to Luxemburg's comrades, friends and lovers in her lifetime.

Digital copies of selected texts will be sent out to all participants upon booking a place.

Closing Performance: Daniel Piro within k.364

Galleries

Free, but ticketed

Please book in advance

As the final week of k.364 unfolds at DCA, we have invited artist and musician Daniel Piro to respond to the work in our galleries. This response will take the form of a live performance happening sporadically throughout the day.

Pioro is a soloist, collaborative artist, and advocate for new and experimental music. Based in London and Edinburgh, he has performed as a soloist with the London Philharmonic Orchestra, the BBC Philharmonic, the London Contemporary Orchestra, and the BBC National Orchestra of Wales.

Pioro actively promotes new music and is interested in finding new ways of listening to and creating sound, as well as developing strong collaborations with composers, musicians, artists, and writers. He works closely with the acclaimed author Michael Morpurgo, a collaboration that has created The Storyteller's Ensemble, a group of musicians devoted to the written and spoken word, as well as working on cross-genre collaborations with artists such as Canadian audiovisual artists Janet Cardiff and George Bures Miller.

DOUGLAS GORDON IN DCA CINEMA

To coincide with Gordon's exhibition we are presenting a selection of his other films in our cinema. This is the first time these major cinematic works are being shown for audiences in Dundee.

I Had Nowhere To Go

Tue 31 May

Cinema

I Had Nowhere To Go is a portrait of Jonas Mekas, the legendary artist, filmmaker, poet, curator, and godfather of American avant-garde cinema.

In historical terms, the diaristic passages read in the film describe Mekas's life as a teenager in occupied Lithuania during World War II. Focusing on the memory of the war as told by a bodiless voice enables Gordon's work to raise the question regarding the (un)representability of the catastrophe of the war. Furthermore, to participate in the cinematic discussion initiated by Claude Lanzmann's 1985 film Shoah, which avoided using archival images of World War II in favour of spoken testimonies.

With its immersive sound environment and intermittent, fleeting images that are evocatively juxtaposed with Mekas's anecdotes, Gordon's film reveals in its subject a puckish humour that outweighs despair, and a redemptive curiosity for life in the face of adversity.

Zidane: A 21st Century Portrait

Sun 24 July

Cinema

Please see website for times, prices and to book tickets

Zidane: A 21st Century Portrait is a film collaboration between Gordon and French artist Philippe Parreno.

Shot on seventeen synchronized cameras, Zidane frames the movements of footballer Zinedine Zidane in real time over the course of a single match between Real Madrid and Villarreal at the Santiago Bernabéu Stadium in Madrid on 23 April, 2005.

The result is a concentrated and absorbing study which offers a unique perspective on the legendary player's contribution to the match, contrasting bursts of furious activity with long periods of intense mental and emotional focus.
